Succeeding for 40 Years

The Educational Opportunity Program Celebrates a Milestone

Letter from the President of Central Connecticut State University

John W. Miller

We all know that bad news has a greater impact than good news, and these days we do not lack for bad financial news. So I think it is important to be reminded of the good news about our University. We recently concluded two important assessments of the climate of our community here, and the results are encouraging. They clearly indicate that the work faculty, staff, and administration have been doing over the past few years has made a real and significant difference in the quality of life for our students and for our campus community.

Student Satisfaction Survey

Satisfaction was higher in 2008 than in 2006 on 45 out of 55 survey items. Thirty items were higher at statistically significant levels, and five were higher by more than 0.2 standard deviations.

The top items on which perceptions increased significantly and most meaningfully from either 2004 or 2006 to 2008 were:

- Billing policies are reasonable.
- Financial aid awards are announced in time to be helpful in college planning.
- Registration processes and procedures are convenient.
- Respondents seldom get the “run-around” when seeking information on this campus.
- A variety of intramural recreational activities are offered.
- Tuition paid is a worthwhile investment.
- There is an adequate selection of food available on campus.

Complete results are available online at:

<http://www.ccsu.edu/oira/assessment/surveys/SSI/default.htm>.

Employee Satisfaction Survey

Satisfaction was higher in 2008 than in 2007 on 53 out of 55 items; 41 were higher at statistically significant levels, and 33 were higher by more than 0.2 standard deviations.

The top items on which perceptions increased significantly and most meaningfully from 2007 to 2008 were:

- The reputation of this institution continues to improve.
- This institution is well-respected in the community.
- Efforts to improve quality are paying off at this institution.
- There is good communication between the faculty and the administration at this institution.
- Administrators share information regularly with faculty and staff.

Complete results are available online at:

<http://www.ccsu.edu/oira/assessment/surveys/CESS/default.htm>.

These results are, indeed, very good news for the University. They give us confidence that we are moving in the right direction and that our work is making an important difference in the quality of this institution. We take pride in the educational services and intellectual resources the University offers our state, especially in these troubled financial times.

FROM US TO YOU In 1968, a CCSU mathematics instructor named George Wyer tossed a pebble into a pond. Wyer’s “pebble” was the Educational Opportunity Program (EOP). In the past 40 years its ripples have transformed the lives of nearly 2,000 young people. Read about the EOP and some of its successful alumni in this issue of Central focus.

CCSU Athletic Director Charles “C. J.” Jones ’69, MS ’72 became the EOP’s director in 1970. Jones came to Central to play basketball, but ended up finding his meaning. Learn about how he and his wife, Linda (Coggshall) Jones ’70, MS ’80, 6th Yr ’86 are repaying Central.

And spend some time with grateful EOP alumnus, Mike Cohen ’70. A cancer survivor and inveterate bicyclist, Cohen rediscovered himself while pedaling from Seattle, Washington to his home in Massachusetts.

Also, in this issue, find out how Dan Boothby ’05 is putting his education to work pursuing his dream of a career in fitness and training. And read about Central’s women’s soccer team, which continues to represent the University with distinction, winning the Northeast Conference Championship last fall, their fifth in seven seasons.

It’s all in this issue of Central focus.

Enjoy!

Succeeding for 40 Years

The EOP Celebrates a Milestone

C.J. Jones was a 24-year-old graduate student in the summer of 1970 when a job opened as co-director of the new venture Central was calling the Educational Opportunity Program (EOP). The program was the brainstorm of George Wyer, a 28-year-old mathematics instructor. Its purpose was to identify high school students who had the potential and desire to do college-level work, but who did not meet admissions standards, and offer them a crash course over one summer that would prepare them for entering college. Most importantly, the program would provide those students with a support system to help them succeed.

Wyer found champions for the idea in the University administration and held the first summer session, with 31 students, in 1969. A very high percentage of those students went on to graduate. Still he couldn't guarantee Jones the program would be a long-term success. But one thing Jones had learned during his four years at Central, was to engage with passion. He took on the EOP assignment as though he had invented it, little suspecting how dramatically it would succeed or that he would remain at its helm for a quarter of a century, while also coaching Central basketball before being named athletic director in 1995.

EOP alumni returned to Central last year from as far away as Seattle, Washington to celebrate the program's 40th anniversary at events in the summer and fall. They, and their fellow EOP alumni, stand as inarguable evidence of the program's effectiveness.

Listen to Aida Silva '86, for instance. "I had emigrated from Puerto Rico in 1980," she says. "I completed my last two years of high school here. I wanted to go to college, but no one else in my family had gone. I was clueless about the process. I didn't know how to handle the college experience."

Thanks to the EOP she enrolled at Central, graduating in 1986. She worked for a while at the International Institute of Connecticut before landing a job at UConn, where she subsequently earned her master's degree and where she is now associate director of admissions. "The EOP was my first exposure to what success could be," she says. "The program helped us learn to believe in ourselves."

It's a conviction you will hear again and again from EOP alumni. In a typical EOP class there are about 50 students. These are educationally and economically disadvantaged young people. Most are the first person from their family to attend college, and they have a lot of impediments to overcome. Yet, says Awilda Reasco, the current director, the program's retention rate is in the 90 percent range.

We've had alumni go on to successful careers in law, television, administration, politics, business and education. For these kids, EOP is a gateway to hope.

"Nearly 2,000 students have graduated from the EOP over the past 40 years," she says. "We've had alumni go on to successful careers in law, television, administration, politics, business and education. For these kids, EOP is a gateway to hope."

Take Henri Alexandre '76, who came to the United States from Haiti in 1967. Like Silva, he was a bright young person, but woefully prepared for the college experience. "The program provided structure for students who didn't know how to organize and study," he says, "but there were lots of programs to help us develop as individuals, also."

After graduating from Central, Alexandre worked as an administrative assistant for the Judicial Department of Connecticut and applied to the UConn Law School. Today he is an assistant attorney general and head of the Public Safety Division of the Attorney General's Office.

Again and again, alumni employ the same metaphors to describe what the EOP meant to them, when it was their conduit to a college education, and what it has meant to them as their professional lives have unfolded.

EOP alumni Yecenia (Torres) Casiano (who will graduate in '09) and Noel Casiano '98 at the EOP 40th-anniversary party.

"The summer that changed my life," is the way John L. "J. L." Williams '80 remembers the EOP. He was a high school wrestler who grew up in a large family. Central provided him with a partial scholarship for wrestling. The EOP took care of the rest.

"The EOP made it possible for me to get into college," he says, "and that enabled me to become an engineer." For the past 28 years he has worked at Boeing in Seattle, Washington.

"It was exceptionally important for me," says Lillian Ortiz '86, dean of institutional development at Manchester Community College. A Hartford High School graduate, she landed a work-study job in C. J. Jones' office during her years at Central. "He was my mentor, advisor and trainer," she says. "Without that great start I probably wouldn't have made it through."

"EOP gave me the discipline to succeed," says David Busanet '79. How much discipline? A resident of Meriden who had no car, Busanet walked to and from the campus, a distance of 10 miles each way.

The EOP Celebrates

“Initially I didn’t even think of going to college,” he says, “but the EOP showed me that I could. It was a big turn in my life.” Today, Busanet is procurement manager for the Connecticut Department of Public Works.

The camaraderie that grew out of the EOP summer program was evident at last summer’s 40th-anniversary event. There are upwards of 2,000 people – a far-flung diaspora – who share the fact that they came from disadvantage and succeeded thanks to a special hand-up called the EOP. That makes them something of a family.

“We built a community where we cared for each other,” says Meg Leake, director of Central’s Learning Center, who was associate director of the EOP from 1987 to 1999. She regularly hears from alumni of the program, people whose lives and contributions to the betterment of the world have been measurably greater thanks to the EOP. “It was an opportunity to make a real difference in the lives of these young people and it was, far and away, the most gratifying experience of my professional life.”

One Passionate Teacher Makes a Difference

In 1968, George Pattison III, who was then known as George Wyer, was a math professor who had joined the faculty of Central a year earlier. A young man with a passion for teaching and a desire to see his students succeed, he had quickly discovered, in his classes, “many minority students who were talented, but fell behind” for lack of effective preparation for the college experience.

“These were bright youngsters, but their high schools hadn’t given them the tools they needed to succeed in college,” he recalls. “They were poorly equipped.”

Determined to do something about it, he wrote a proposal for a summer experience to address the needs of those students. The program he envisioned would quickly introduce disadvantaged students to the overall college experience and resources that could help them succeed, and give them a taste of what kind of academic expectations they could anticipate.

Pattison, who had taught both junior and senior high school and at a junior college before coming to Central, was a big believer in rules. His plan was built around a set of standards to which all participating students would be required to adhere.

He soon found champions for his proposal in the University’s administration and launched it in the summer of 1969. Thirty-one students enrolled in the first session and their success rate was so striking that the Educational Opportunity Program (EOP) quickly became an accepted thread in the CCSU fabric.

Pattison remained at Central for five years and then left to accept a position in the West Hartford public schools, where he remained for the balance of his career. He retired in 1998 and moved to Florida. The EOP, however, goes on, affirming its value year after year.

Invested in the Fabric of Central

Ask them to tell you about their wedding and they blurt out two words, in unison – “We eloped!” It’s like a stand-up routine, comfortable material they’ve been honing for a long time, a story they never get tired of telling. Then they look at each other and smile sheepishly, remembering how things were, almost 35 years ago.

Linda (Coggshall) Jones '70, MS '80, 6th Yr '86 and Charles “C. J.” Jones, Jr. '69, MS '72 with Boomer.

It was a balmy August evening in 1974, soft pastel shadows overspreading the CCSU campus, when Charles “C. J.” Jones '69, MS '72, a black man from Bayside, Queens, and Linda Coggshall '70, MS '80, 6th Yr '86, a white woman who grew up in Hartford, entered the courtyard at Central. Both had come to Central for an education, but they had found so much more.

Attended only by close friends Howie Dickenman '70, MS '75, C. J.’s basketball buddy, and Ellen Stewart '71, MS '77, Linda’s former roommate and a fellow teacher, they recited their simple vows before another friend, Justice of the Peace Bert Anderson. It was over in just a few minutes and everyone retired to the Marriott for celebratory drinks.

Photographer Jim Meyers recorded the little ceremony for posterity. There wasn’t much to record – just two folks, accompanied by their friends, tying the knot. That they were also committing an act of defiance against conventions of the time (only seven years had passed since the U. S. Supreme Court had ruled anti-miscegenation laws unconstitutional) is not apparent in Meyers’ photos and may be hard to imagine for many born in the ensuing three and a half decades.

But C. J. and Linda were aware of the significance of what they were doing. “We hadn’t even told our families,”

Linda confesses. “We weren’t sure what kind of reaction we were going to get.” So, to forestall having to break the news for a little while longer, they took advantage of an Alumni Association trip to Hawaii.

A couple of things are apparent in Meyers’ photos. One is their love for each other, an abiding affection that has sustained them for more than four decades now. And the other is the setting they chose, at the heart of the University that brought them together, and to which they have remained as committed as they have to each other.

The Good Life

C. J. was still an undergraduate, a rangy kid who was lighting up the basketball court, when he and Linda met in 1966. He was hosting a party at his New Britain apartment and she came by to help him get the place ready. She was supposed to have a date for the party, a friend of C. J.’s who was scheduled to arrive later. But wires got crossed, the friend didn’t arrive, and eight years later C. J. and Linda were married.

By that time he was directing the University’s Educational Opportunity Program (EOP), a job he had taken the summer after he graduated, and she had just wrapped up her fourth year as a teacher in South Windsor’s public schools. When they returned from Hawaii she joined the New Britain public schools, where she remained – in many different teaching and administrative roles – for the next 30 years.

Together they invested themselves in the fabric of Central. C. J. put his distinctive stamp on the EOP for 25 years, and for 19 of those years he also coached Central basketball, first as assistant coach and then, starting in 1987, as head coach. In 1995, he was named athletic director.

Linda, who helped plan EOP trips, recreational events and fund-raising, soon earned the nickname “Mother of the Team.” On a lot in Terryville they built a home in 1976. They settled in and built a good life for themselves, enriched by the many young lives they touched.

Regular contributors to the CCSU scholarship fund, they created their own scholarships in the 1990s, with funds earmarked for the EOP and athletics and New Britain students embarking upon careers in teaching.

Last year, in an act of exceptional generosity, they unified those programs by bequeathing their entire estate to the University. “Central gave us what we’ve enjoyed,” says C. J. “We wouldn’t have met if we hadn’t come here. We owe a lot to the University.”

Athletic Fields Upgrades Enhance Facilities for Everyone

Thanks to a major effort that has been in planning and development since 2006, CCSU's outdoor athletic fields – for lacrosse, football, soccer, baseball, and softball – and an adjacent recreational field are getting a major upgrade that will enhance their utility for all CCSU students.

Funding for this project comes from fees collected since 2002 and specified by the CSUS Board of Trustees for recreation and intercollegiate athletics, according to President Jack Miller.

Over the next three years, several of the outdoor fields will be retrofitted with new artificial turf that offers advantages over grass. Additionally, new grandstands will be added for the soccer field and, beneath it, a modern facility housing bathrooms and concession space. Finally, an NCAA track will be installed around the soccer field.

The improved turf phase of the project includes significant improvements to the nearby pavilion, including the addition of bathrooms. Those enhancements significantly increase the pavilion's capacity to accommodate larger groups and functions. The baseball field will also benefit from new grandstands. Additional landscaping and lighting throughout the complex, including around the completely regraded recreation field north of the baseball diamond, are also planned.

Architects' drawing shows the extensive upgrades that will improve and better unify CCSU's outdoor athletic facilities, enhancing their utility for athletes as well as the entire university community.

“Not all of the improvements are visible to those using the facilities. Undergirding the whole complex is a remarkable subterranean drainage system the University is installing to meet Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) requirements,” says Dan Moran ’73, MS ’88, associate chief administrative officer. “These fields generate run-off from precipitation. Our challenge was to engineer them in such a way that they permit zero run-off into this area’s drainage basin.” The University is working further with engineers and DEP to develop this same process throughout the campus as part of its sustainability program.

To achieve that goal, Macchi Engineers, the company working with Facilities on the plan for the upgrade, called upon Geller Sport Inc., a leading landscape architecture and civil engineering firm based in Boston. The fields will be re-graded, with sand bases supporting the new turf, draining into a sophisticated underground system utilizing a large cistern that will catch the water and prevent run-off to the nearby stream.

The football field has already been equipped with the turf, which, according to Sal Cintorino ’87, MS ’90, assistant chief administrative officer, provides several benefits to the University. “Nearly as soft and textured as natural grass, it’s easier for athletes to play on and results in far fewer injuries than earlier generations of artificial turf. Moreover, the new turf is much more durable. In the winter, snow can be cleaned off the fields with motorized equipment without damaging the turf, substantially reducing maintenance expenses,” says Cintorino.

Once the lighting is in place, Cintorino notes, “all of the fields will become accessible for the entire University community.” The upgrade will dramatically boost the recreational value of the fields for all students.

The recreational field and both the baseball and softball fields are expected to be completed by late next spring or early in the summer. The target date for resurfacing the soccer field is spring 2010. The new track will be installed last. Its completion will allow the University’s track team to practice and compete on campus for the first time in over a decade and the track will also be available for use by the CCSU community. The Department of Public Works is managing the grandstand and bathroom phase of the recreation athletic field enhancements. Moran and Cintorino are unable to say precisely when the track will be complete. They are working toward a target date of 2011.

Moran is quick to note, however, that many of the enhancements will be complete this spring. “These improvements make our outdoor facilities much more useful for the entire CCSU community,” he says.

2008 Honor Roll of Donors

These pages recognize gifts made to the CCSU Foundation, Inc., between July 1, 2007 and June 30, 2008.

Thank You

In 2007-08, more than 4,000 donors contributed over $1.9 million to the University. This record-breaking year represents a 22 percent increase in new donors, an increase in all donors, and a new level of alumni giving. Your remarkable generosity supported our students with scholarships and other forms of financial aid, exciting academic enrichment programs, athletics, and a range of other initiatives designed to enhance the Central educational experience. Your contributions enabled CCSU to remain both excellent AND accessible.

Thanks to a bold new strategic plan, CCSU is poised for an exciting future. Already recognized as a Leadership Institution (Association of American Colleges & Universities), a "Best Northeastern College" and an "America's Best Value College" (Princeton Review), Central aspires to be one of the finest public universities in the state and region. We hope you will join us by continuing to support our efforts with your generosity. A postage paid envelope is enclosed for your convenience. Your gifts do make a difference in the lives of our students and the life of the University. We deeply appreciate all that you do for CCSU.

CCSU Reaches Out to Veterans

Nearly 22 percent of Connecticut veterans returning from the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan are experiencing post-traumatic stress disorder. Perhaps even more alarming, the veterans most in need of support are the least likely to seek it out. These and other troubling findings have come to light thanks to research conducted by Professor of Psychology Marc Goldstein and Professor of Counseling Emeritus Jim Malley. Working through the Center for Public Policy and Social Research (CPPSR) at CCSU, they developed a report commissioned by the Connecticut Office of Veterans' Affairs, which was released at the end of January (available at: www.ccsu.edu/cppsr).

This is the latest in a series of initiatives at Central focused on the state's veterans. Other notable programs include the ongoing CPPSR's Veterans Oral History Project developed in partnership with the Library of Congress. To date, interviews of more than 144 vets have been videotaped and archived. These oral histories and related materials can be viewed online (www.ccsu.edu/vhp).

In 2007, CPPSR also coordinated its first-ever Veterans Summit. Aimed at learning more about veterans from Iraq and Afghanistan, the Summit provided a forum for veterans to voice their concerns and an opportunity to learn from national and regional experts on veterans' issues.

Recently, thanks to the support of Joe Arnone '59, Paul Gianaris '70, Zachary Gianaris, Phil Kurze '72 and Bob Cernock, Institutional Advancement launched an expanded fund-raising effort to provide scholarship support for the University's annual Student Veteran Excellence Award. And, a Veterans Drop-In Center was opened at the end of 2008.

Forthcoming initiatives include the creation of a veterans monument near the Student Center. In fall 2009 Professor of Counseling and Family Therapy Jane Fried will offer a First Year Experience course for returning veterans, specifically designed as a "transition to civilian life" program. The course will draw on Fried's experience teaching Vietnam era vets and will focus on the differences between learning in the military and learning in college. Fried aims to offer a comfortable and supportive environment for the veterans to explore a range of issues and develop diagnostic tools to enable them to negotiate the transition from soldier to civilian student.

The Office of Alumni & Development is reaching out to CCSU vets and inviting them to participate in these and other activities. Many have responded to the call, and the Office is asking for other vets to get in touch by calling 860-832-1740 or emailing alumnidept@ccsu.edu.

CAMPUS OBITUARIES

Dr. Abner S. Baker III, associate professor of history, emeritus, who specialized in American history, and particularly the American Civil War, died on December 30, 2008. After his retirement in 2000, he embarked upon a second career, earning a master's degree in marriage and family therapy, and was developing a private practice as an independent practitioner.

Dr. Earl W. Bihlmeyer, professor of psychology, emeritus, died July 22, 2008. A member of the CCSU faculty since 1962, he served as chair of the department. Following his retirement from the University in 1981 Dr. Bihlmeyer joined the editorial staff of the New Britain Herald where he worked as a food writer and columnist.

Dr. Joseph W. Duffy, dean, emeritus, of what is now the School of Engineering & Technology, died July 30, 2008. Dr. Duffy joined the faculty of CCSU in 1965 as an instructor of industrial education. In 1976 he was named the first dean of the School of Technology and served in that position until his retirement in 1989.

Dr. Albert Lindia, professor of education, emeritus, died November 3, 2008. While a professor at the University he also acted as the affirmative action officer. Prior to his career at CCSU, he served as special assistant for the Department of Education in Washington, D.C.

Mary Jane (Zaleski) Hogan Nolan '80, MS '81, who served the CCSU community for nearly 20 years and retired in 1995 as assistant director of student center operations, died November 2, 2008.

Marian M. McKenzie, assistant professor of English and philosophy, emerita, died September 25, 2008.

Dr. Brian M. O'Connell, professor of computer science and philosophy, died May 21, 2008. Prior to teaching at CCSU, he practiced law in the Hartford area. At CCSU he also served as assistant director of the Honors Program.

Finding his Passion at CCSU

When he thinks back on his childhood in Kennebunk, Maine, Dan Boothby '05 recalls that he was “a really skinny kid” who didn’t come into proportion until high school, when he played football and baseball. It was there that he came under the guidance of teacher and assistant principal David Mitchell. It was a relationship that changed his life.

“Mr. Mitchell was into conditioning and he encouraged me to train with him,” Boothby remembers. “I learned a lot about training and physiology, and I was able to see the results right away.”

But, in fact, he only saw some of the results — a leaner, stronger physique and a greater sense of self-confidence to go with it. Other results were still a few years in the future.

After high school, Boothby enrolled at the University of Maine for a year before transferring to Central, attracted by the University’s Exercise Science and Health Promotion Program. “I knew right away that I had found what I was looking for,” he says. “I want to be one of those people who love going to work, and I knew this was the work I wanted to do. The courses really reinforced my passion for this work.”

Boothby took full advantage of the Central experience, participating in varsity football while also earning the respect of his professors and coaches, building relationships that earned him a strength coach internship while he was still an undergraduate. “Strength and Conditioning Coach Mike Erickson saw me as a raw young man, interested in the field, and he went out of his way to help me,” Boothby says. “He was very demanding, but he gave me an opportunity, and I have worked very hard to deserve it.”

As graduation neared in 2005, and Boothby considered work options, Assistant Strength Coach Drew Haffey put in a word for him with Joel St. Cyr, the assistant strength coach at Northeastern University. That fall Boothby joined the athletic staff at Northeastern as assistant strength and conditioning coach. The following July he was also named director of player development of the Northeastern men’s and women’s hockey teams.

A National Strength and Conditioning Association certified strength and conditioning specialist, Boothby also conducts Dan Boothby Performance Training camps for high school, college, professional, and Olympic-caliber athletes. Among the athletes he has worked with is Northeastern alumna Zara Northover, who competed in the shot put in Beijing. Not bad for a former “skinny kid” from Maine.

A Championship Tradition Takes Shape

Central’s women’s soccer team brought home glory last fall. Winning their fifth Northeast Conference Championship in seven seasons, they earned a berth in the 2008 NCAA Women’s Soccer College Cup.

Though they lost to Boston College, 3-0, in first-round action, they put the competition on notice that the Blue Devils are a perennial force to be reckoned with. Coach Mick D’Arcy’s first recruiting class arrived in New Britain in the fall of 2001. Since then, every student-athlete who has played four years for D’Arcy has left the program with two championship rings and, in turn, two trips to the NCAA Tournament.

The Blue Devils’ tradition of success began when they won their first Northeast Conference title in 1997 and appeared in the NCAA play-in round. They defended their crown in 1998 and played at Harvard in NCAA first round competition. In 2002, with their third league title, they launched a string of four straight championship seasons. Along the way they became the first CCSU sports team to win an NCAA Division I tournament game, defeating their old nemesis, Boston College, in first-round play during the 2003 Women’s Soccer College Cup.

“When we recruit, we talk about the history of the program,” D’Arcy said. “We also say that the past is no indicator of what is going to happen in the future. The new crop understands there is a tradition, but they have to write their own story.”

Scholarship Established in Memory of Fran Librera

Carol Ammon '73 has organized and helped establish a scholarship in memory of fellow alumna and roommate Frances E. Librera '73. The scholarship will benefit full-time, matriculated undergraduate students in the School of Education and Professional Studies who are majoring in physical education and human performance.

The scholarship was established to honor Librera's memory, her contagious laugh, and beautiful smile that touched all who met her. As a student, Frances excelled at tennis, volleyball, and swimming, and was a familiar face in Kaiser Hall. A member of the Blue Dolphin Synchronized Swimming team and a majorette, she also helped organize a large "Home Run Derby," which she won several years in a row. Frances earned a bachelor of science degree in 1973 and enjoyed a successful career as a business analyst for ING and Aetna in Hartford, CT.

Until her death in 2006, she remained life-long friends with her college roommates, Ammon, Paula Phenix Allan '73, and Coleen Meyer DiSilvestro '73. Scholarship organizer Ammon received a bachelor's degree in biology from Central, and is founder and former CEO and chairman of the board of Endo Pharmaceuticals, Inc., a specialty pharmaceutical company with market leadership in pain management. She was named the CEO of the Year in 2004 by the Eastern Technology Council, and in March 2006, she was selected by Central Penn Business Journal as one of Pennsylvania's "Best 50 Women in Business."

A room in Kaiser Hall has been dedicated in Frances Librera's memory.

Life Lessons from the EOP

“At certain times,” says Mike Cohen '70, “I would just stop, and someone would appear and give me important information. Or someone would take me in. Things worked out. People were being helpful. It’s a very spiritual existence.”

He’s talking about the remarkable journey he completed in the summer of 2007. But he might be talking about the bigger journey upon which he embarked when he came to Central. After all, the two are inextricably intertwined.

Cohen, who grew up in New London, found his way into Central in 1966, via the EOP. It “gave me a chance to get in the door,” and he’s quick to assert that his education opened the doors to the rest of his life. “Learning how to write is one of the two most important things you can learn in college,” he says. “The other is to learn how to learn. There’s no way I could have prepared for the job I have today, other than by being willing to continually learn new things.”

Along the way he also learned what it takes to be a survivor. After graduating, he tried his hand at what he calls “several survival jobs” before enlisting in the US Air Force in 1977 and enrolling in officer’s training. Over the next five and a half years he attended computer school, acquired a trade, and eventually rose to the rank of captain.

After military service, Cohen settled in Massachusetts and embarked upon a career as a computer consultant and web developer that included a stint with the State.

After surviving cancer, in 1992, he felt a need to tackle a new challenge. An avid biker, he flew to Seattle, assembled his bicycle at Sea-Tac Airport and, without hesitation, headed east. It took five weeks to pedal his way back home.

When he repeated the journey, in 2007, he was testing the boundaries of middle age. It would be his last cross-country bike trip, and though there were times when he felt like throwing in the towel he never seriously entertained the idea. Instead, he used the long days to reacquaint himself with America at ground level and ruminate on all that life had taught him about survival.

He didn’t forget those life lessons when he got home. Last year, as Central prepared to celebrate the EOP’s 40th anniversary, he contacted Director Awilda Reasco and made a generous donation – bookstore funds for each EOP student, plus additional money to help the program.

“The EOP made an incalculable difference in my life,” he says. “It got me into college and gave me the tools to succeed. Multiply that by 40 years and the stories of all the other students. I think the EOP has probably repaid Connecticut a thousand times over.”
